We invite you to join us in recognizing Child Abuse Prevention Month during April.

Together we will learn how science, connection and faith can work together to reduce the effects of trauma, build resilience and provide protective factors that are essential in reducing occurrences of child abuse and neglect.

What is Resilience and how do we get it?

Resilience can be defined as the ability to thrive, adapt and cope despite difficult and stressful times. Resilience is not something you’re is born with; it gets built over time. It can be built through positive connections with others. Connections Matter!

CONNECTIONS MATTER!

Use your unique gifts and talents, perspectives and faith traditions to make caring connections. They don’t have to require a large time commitment. Here are few ideas of Ways You Can Be a Connection:

- Make cookies and give them to a neighbor or visitor in your place of worship.
- Rake leaves or shovel snow for a neighbor.
- Send a note to a connection that matters to you.
- Use social media to interact with youth. Post kind comments and encouraging words.
- Offer to babysit.
- Provide free tax filing assistance.
- Walk or run for a cause.
